

Plastpro Introduces Authentic Wrought Iron Glass and Wrought Iron Frames

New Products Add Charm to Homes by Giving Entrances a Unique Look

LIVINGSTON, NJ – January 31, 2008 - Plastpro, Inc., a leading supplier of fiberglass doors and home products in the United States, announced that it is introducing Wrought Iron Glass and Wrought Iron Frame accents to its Rustic Door Collection. Designed to be a stylish option for accentuating home entrance doorlites, the new products are maintenance-free and extremely energy efficient.

Each authentic Wrought Iron Frame is customized by hand to complement the range of cutouts in the Rustic Series. In addition to resisting rust and corrosion, the Wrought Iron Frames also come with a beautiful powder coat finish.

For the Wrought Iron Glass, which is available in Priscilla and Camelia designs, the decorative ironwork is placed between glass panes that have a textured appearance to maximize privacy while enhancing the beauty of the door. Priscilla is matched with bubble glass, while the Camelia accent is paired with elegant waterfall glass.

“Our goal was to create a wrought iron frame that would enhance the quality and expand the wrought iron glass design options for fiberglass doors currently on the market,” said Franco An, President of Plastpro, Inc. “It is a totally unique product.”

Mr. An noted that in addition to the benefits of durability and appearance, the Wrought Iron Frame adopts ‘thermally broken’ technology, which creates a barrier between the inner and outer frame to keep the cold out in winter and the heat out in summer for higher energy efficiency.

“Energy efficiency is a top priority for homeowners,” says Mark Ho, Plastpro’s Director of Sales. “Homebuyers and homeowners are becoming increasingly aware of it, and more concerned than ever about whether the products they’re purchasing are energy efficient.”

The Wrought Iron designs can also be placed in the True White Oak, Smooth Skin, and Woodgrain collections, and may be purchased through door distributors and major retailers across the country.
